

Acquiring Peace

Peace is acquired when we admit that the strain of constant quarreling is virtually intolerable to our personal well-being.

Peace is acquired when we affirm that we must first be an example of it.

Peace is acquired when we attest that we can never go wrong when doing something right.

Peace is acquired when we are steadfast in discernment and dedication.

Peace is acquired when we decide to eliminate actions that create conflict.

Peace is acquired when we declare that peace is a testament to our enlightenment.

Peace is acquired when we empower the thought that there is a place within us that no challenge can destroy.

Peace is acquired when we endure acceptance and annihilate resentment.

Peace is acquired when we face the fact that it is not possible for those who are not willing to listen.

Peace is acquired when we get prepared that if peace does not prevail - we stay brave in the attempt.

Peace is acquired when we have eyes with foresight and minds with forethought.

Peace is acquired when we know that peace must never be overlooked or underestimated.

Peace is acquired when we maintain our humbleness and humility.

Peace is acquired when we quiet our wounds and quicken our wellness.

Peace is acquired when we realize that peace cannot happen without patience.

Peace is acquired when we remain peaceful while giving someone a piece of our mind.

Peace is acquired when we resolve disagreements by accepting one's differences.

Peace is acquired when we see grievances and resentments as the root cause of separation.

Peace is acquired when we sense that ego, whether another's or our own is running someone's show.

Peace is acquired when we speak only the truth.

Peace is acquired when we stay open-hearted and open-minded.

Peace is acquired when we suspect that the saying no pain- no gain – is truly insane.

Peace is acquired when we urgently watch for the red signs and signals.

Peace is acquired when we view hidden agendas as a means against peace.

Peace is acquired when we yearn for it.